

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a handheld camera having a sensor adapted to sense an image and a processing system. The processing system includes a camera manager for controlling the sensing of the image, an image processing manager for manipulating the image and, a print manager for controlling printing of the manipulated image.